INSIDE THIS ISSUE

Your Council Connection...

By Jack Vanderbilt

This is the 2nd of the new column providing our members with a more transparent view of Church Council activity. The column will try to include items of interest, whether they are major or not. Note that because of Newsletter deadlines, the column actually covers from about the 20th of one month to 20th of the next. So this report covers activity up to about the 20th of January.

This was a busy month for the council. The regular meeting covered two nights (the 2nd and 9th) and a Blueprint for Change (BfC) meeting was held on the 16th.

The business of the December Council meeting included:

1. The 2012 Budget was the main focus. As you can imagine, the coming year is a difficult one to predict, since costs will change as we go through a pastoral change and BfC changes. The new budget (which will be reviewed in detail at the Congregational Meeting on the 29th starting at 10:30am) contains challenges that all members will need to address as we proceed on our journey together.
2. The Eligible Voter List was reviewed and approved. It was noted that a few members, including some youth, do not appear on that list. The reason for this is that to be a voter, a member must have received communion and given a financial gift of record during the year (a Constitutional requirement). Simply placing cash in the offering plate does not provide a record. Therefore those wishing to vote must put at least $1 in a regular envelope (or even an envelope with their name on it) sometime during the year to qualify.
3. A Call Committee consisting of Kim Gajewski, Mark Tschiegg, Kat Smith, Susan Garrett-Moon, Doug Endorf, Fred Christensen, and Ken Zacharias was proposed and approved. As noted last month, Call Committee activity will not be reported here, unless it requires Council action.
4. Property issues were deferred for discussion on the budget. It was noted that the old shed has been removed.
5. The 6th BfC meeting was held on the 16th, but since your reporter was not able to attend, any info from that meeting will be provided next month.

Brothers & Sisters,

In light of our recent conversations about the need for evangelism in a changing world, I'm giving my Pastor's letter space to Pastor Peter Steinke of the Alban Institute. He is a consultant to churches seeking to deal with the difficulties of doing faithful ministry in the fast changing twenty first century world. Pastor Steinke speaks about the journey of a congregation – the journey we're embarked on. His article is filled with the realities before us, but also with the hope that is ours as the Holy Spirit leads us into the future. It's worth reading. -- Pastor McGurn

THERE ONCE WAS A WORLD

There once was a world where the church functioned according to what some have called the "attractional" model (others have named it the participatory model). People come to a place, consume the spiritual goods, and serve as patrons to "meet the budget." But a shift has happened. North American culture has taken new turns.

Christendom refers to a period of time when the Christian faith profoundly informed the culture. And, in turn, the culture carried the traditions, symbols, and rituals of the Christian faith. Another often-used term—post-Christian era—captures the reality that the importance and influence of Christianity in North American society has been in decline for at least three decades. In a "post-Christian" world, the church cannot expect favorable treatment or higher visibility.

One could say that a gathering storm—a confluence of factors—has assailed the church and its dominant perch on the societal ladder. None of this has to do with the church's internal functioning. The sea change is external or contextual. There once was a world that was eager to be hospitable to Christian churches and supported "blue laws," soccer-less Sundays, eating fish rather than meat on Friday, public prayer in schools and at nodal events, deferring to clergy by way of discounts, weekly religion sections in urban newspapers, and greeting others with "Merry Christmas." Now, suddenly, with steep changes happening in our society, congregations have to ask themselves whether they are responding to a world that no longer exists.

The loss of members, influence, and a sense of mission—the church's misfortune of the moment—resembles the experience of Israel's exile. The lesson of the present dislocation is clear, if still not learned. The era of Christendom is gone. No longer is culture subsidizing and supporting churches.

Today's rapidly changing world is pressing the church to respond to a shift of paradigms—but not for the first time. In previous shifts, the church has both responded slowly and responded imaginatively. More than once, much of what people have thought and done has had to be reworked.

Each shift carried both danger and opportunity. In today's context, the church is challenged by the astonishing pace of change in the world. We are in some ways ill prepared to act rapidly, since the church is as an entity made up of people who are creatures of nature, subject to seasons, rhythms, and stages. We cannot be mechanically geared for shifting quickly.

Regardless of the nature of change, the church affirms that the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is the God who has been active in history and who will be active in the future. Faced with a strange new world, the church is challenged to be true to its purpose and attuned to its context. I believe the paradigm shift of rapid change constitutes a rich opportunity for the church. God has set the door open to the future. But the new day is as perplexing as it is promising. As Old Testament scholar Walter Brueggemann explains, "It is abundantly and unmistakably clear that we are in a deep dislocation in our society that touches every aspect of our lives." We are living in a new context where old certainties are disappearing, old institutions are less dependable, old assumptions are questionable, and old neighborhoods are less cohesive. Logically, if not spiritually, we may even have to allow for the possibility that these dislocations could be part of God's new creation. It may be God working through the unknown that contributes to the destabilization of the world. God is no stranger to Eden's deportation, Babel's scattering, the exodus, the exile, and crucifixion. God can be surprising, mysterious, taking history into unexpected turns.

The challenge of change for a congregation on a downward slope is precisely to redefine and redirect its mission. They have to realize that decline is not an end to mission. Yes, they are mere shadows of their past. Yes, rethinking mission is difficult, for congregations are burdened by big or deteriorating buildings, smaller staffs, a paucity of young families, and a shortage of hope. But expansion is not the sole gauge of mission orientation. One problem with this thinking is the belief that, for congregations, all things are equal. But congregations are not in the same place, same stage, or same circumstance. That's not reality.

Congregations may hanker for a technique that will bring about results they want to achieve; they want to replicate what has been discovered by someone else: "Give me a copy of the wonderful plans." Seeing what those plans have done for others, they want the same result—but without going through the process that got the others to that point. The shortcut of imitation certainly bypasses a lot of pain. How churches hunger for precisely this situation.

Meaningful, lasting outcomes are the result of the journey and the learning that takes place. Maybe a word of caution should be stamped on all programs: "Not transferable." Transition time is life's curriculum. Being on the path opens new insight; being on the path, not the steps one takes, is the very condition necessary for learning.

The Bible is replete with stories of transition and exile. Jacob, who was always a wimpy character, is on his way to meet the brother he tricked and fooled. He struggles with an angel on the wet banks of the Jabbok River, and out of the struggle finds strength to meet his brother. Jesus spends forty days in the wilderness—alone, hungry, numb—and the devil tempts him three times. The process of thinking, testing, and exploring contains the lessons. Churches need to remember that no handbook is available on freelancing mission. Only by going out, being there, and seeing from a fresh angle will the process lead to learning. Discovering how to respond to shifts and changes is the learning. Self-confidence is a byproduct. But growth is in the struggle, the push, and the journey.

Storage Problems ... Did you do your part??

Last month I addressed the storage problem, and I asked you if you would check whatever storage for which you are responsible and dispose of the unused stuff. If you haven't done it yet, please do it in the next couple weeks.

After that time, my "eager-to-through-away-things" team will begin to review the storage picture and bring it into reasonable shape. Remember, look in the new boiler room, the old 'boiler' (really electrical) room, the Fellowship Hall closets, all class room and meeting room cabinets, the loft, the attic spaces, the kitchen, and ... wherever you have 'stashed' your 'stuff.'

And if you haven't used it in 2-3 years, you probably don't need it. As mentioned before, surplus that might be of use to others could be put it in the Fellowship Hall with a "free – take me" sign. Thanks for helping!

Sunday School

In Nursery through 6th grade Sunday School, we began our next module, The Vertical Edge. Our key bible verse is from Colossians 3, "Work willingly at whatever you do as though you were working for the Lord rather than for people". As usual, it feels like an equally good lesson for adults. One of our songs challenges us to think about how long it is from the time we wake up, reviewing our long list of things we have to do that day, until we think about the Lord. Hmm.....Later in February, we'll begin our next module, Miracle Lab, which will be all about Jesus' miracles.

DEVIL'S BEATITUDES

If the Devil were to write his Beatitudes, they would probably go something like this:

Blessed are those who are too tired, too busy; to distracted to spend an hour once a week with their fellow Christians in Church - they are my best workers.

Blessed are those Christians who wait to be asked and expect to be thanked - I can use them.

Blessed are the touchy, with a bit of luck they may stop going to Church - they are my missionaries.

Blessed are those who are very religious but get on everyone's nerves - they are mine forever.

Blessed are the troublemakers - they shall be called my children.

Blessed are those who have no time to pray – they are-easy prey for me.

Blessed are the gossipers - for they are my secret agents.

Blessed are those critical of church leadership - for they shall inherit a place with me in my fate.

Blessed are the complainers – I'm all ears for them.

Blessed are you when you read this and think it is about other people and not yourself - I've got you.

Be faithful
until death,
and I will give you the crown of life.

Revelation 2:10, NRSV

When was the last time you had a financial checkup?

When you hear the word checkup, what comes to mind?

Most likely it's your physical health. But checkups are just as critical to your financial health—which may be equally important.

Most financial professionals recommend you get a financial checkup at least once a year. The experienced and knowledgeable financial representatives at Thrivent Financial for Lutherans can help.

Thrivent Financial offers simple ways to deal with changes in your life that naturally lead to changes in your financial needs. For example, if you have a new grandchild, money you invested in a CD two years ago may now make more sense in a college savings plan. Or a recent job promotion may mean it's finally time to start saving for retirement.

With regular financial checkups, you can ensure you're doing what's necessary today to help you achieve your long-term financial goals.

For a financial checkup or to discuss how Thrivent Financial can help you achieve your financial goals, contact Mimi A (Mary) Boxwell of the TriState Group at 860 942-4012 or at mimi.boxwell@thrivent.com today, or visit Thrivent.com.
